Baptisms in Venezuela brought about in part by TRACTS

Members of churches of Christ in Venezuela have sent Antonio thousands of photographs showing the use of funds and shipments of food and clothes in benevolent works in that country. Plus, scores and scores of photographs of baptisms. For the last several months those photographs have continued to come in, almost all without any identification of the people in them or information about those baptized. Antonio suggested sending contacts a Google Form evangelists and others could easily fill in and return to us. He prepared it right away with a statement preceding the form itself stating the purpose and importance of it with regard to further shipments of tracts and other printed resources to churches in Venezuela. We were somewhat dubious about making a request of this nature due to the effort required to fill out a form for each relevant baptism but have begun to receive reports and are much encouraged. A major motive behind the Form is to obtain specific information for you, the congregations, and individuals who, through your contributions, make possible these works.

Following is a screenshot of the spreadsheet automatically compiled as the Forms are sent, in the case of this first one, by three evangelists in two cities of Venezuela who report a total of 32 baptisms in which tracts played at least some part.
